ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Method and system for providing real time commodity price communication via the Internet such that the transmitted information is automatically refreshed on the traders' stations when the prices are entered from a remote input station, where the web application may use a combination of server-side PUSH technology combined with one of ActiveX controls and Java applets on the client-side is provided.

5